

New Missions for the German Armed Forces Require Streamlined Acquisition Management

Gerhard Brauer
NDIA T&E Conference, February 24 - March 1, 2002

Presentation Outline

- Background
- Current deployment of German Armed Forces
- Required capabilities for German Armed Forces
- The German Acquisition System
- The accelerated German Acquisition Process
- Testing aspects of this process
- Cooperation to enhance efficiency
- Special measures to support troops

Bundeswehr "out of area" Missions

Since 1992
former Yugoslavia
KFOR, SFOR, Task Force Fox

1997
Albania

1999
Yugoslavia
NATO – Air Strikes

Currently Afghanistan
Enduring Freedom,
ISAF

1991 - 1997
Iraq
UNSCOM

1992 - 1993
Cambodia
UNTAC

NATO, "Noble Eagle"

1992 - 1993
Somalia
UNOSOM

1999
East - Timor
INTERFET

Current Forces Against Terrorist Target

Transport aircraft

Reconnaissance Vehicle
"fuchs"

Special
Forces

Flying hospitals

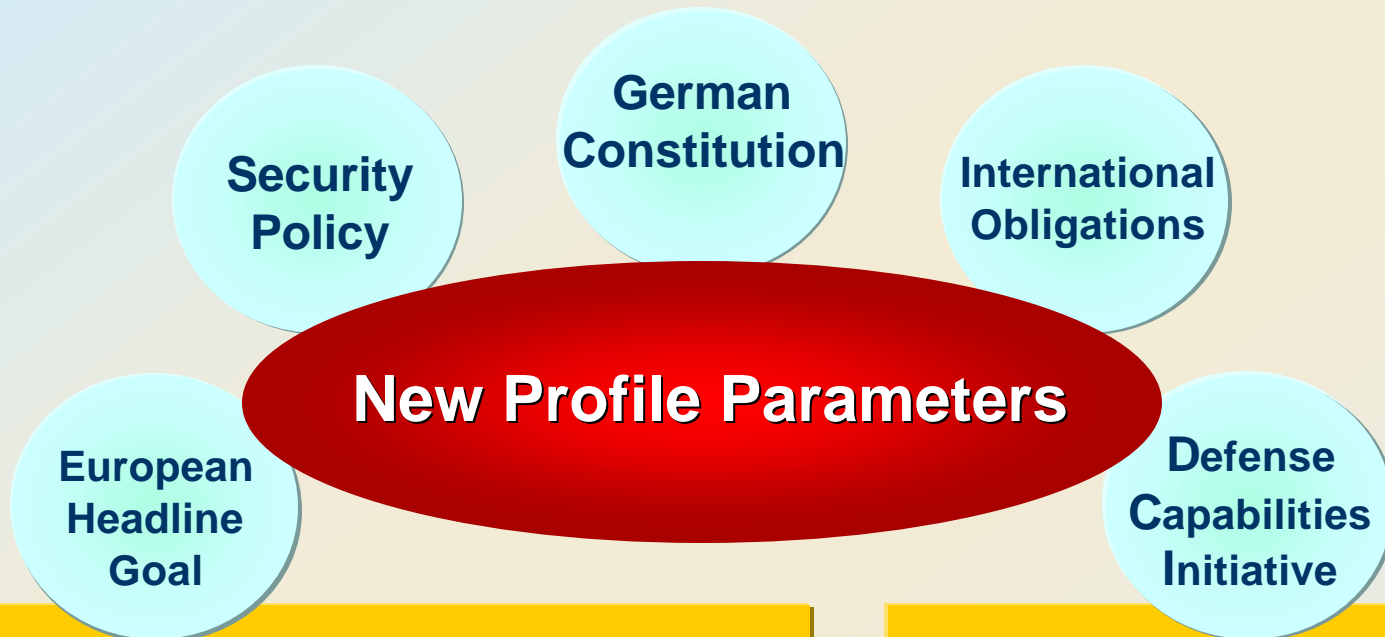

Naval
units

New Capability Profile

Operating Forces: 50,000 to 60,000 Army, plus Air Force and Navy

Command Level: Corps

Readiness: Within 60 days,
smaller contingencies earlier

Sustainability: Up to 1 year

In Operation: By 2003

Improvements

- Command & Control
- Deployability/ Mobility
- Mission Effectiveness
- Sustainability/ Logistics
- Mission Survivability

German Acquisition System

Federal Ministry of Defense

ACQUISITION

Federal Office of Defense Technology and Procurement

(Acquisition Agency / Procurement Authority)

Liaison Office
for Defense Materiel
USA/Canada

WTD
Test Centers (7)

Naval Arsenal (1)
Research Centers /
Laboratories (3)

German Acquisition Process

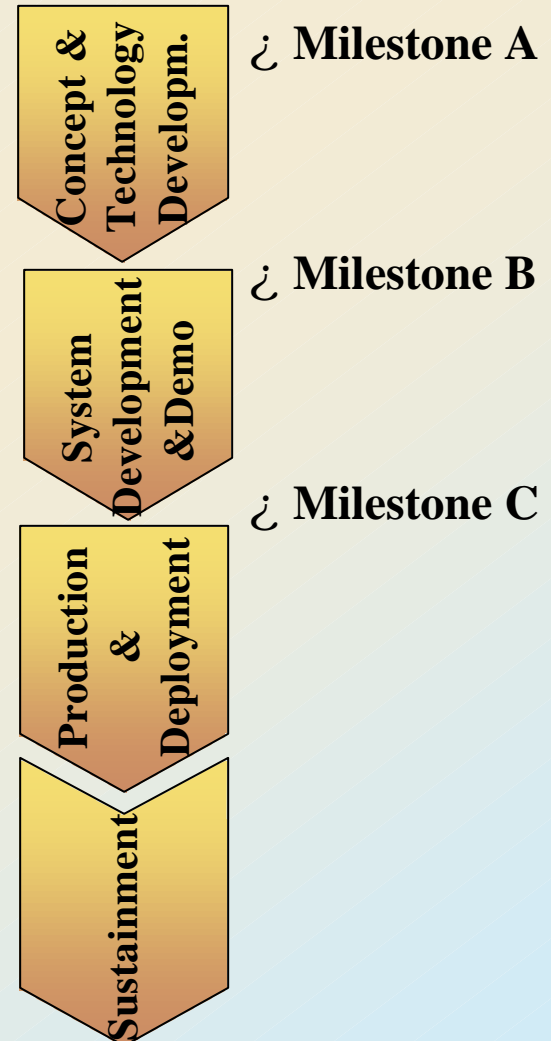

Comparison of Acquisition Processes

CPM 2001

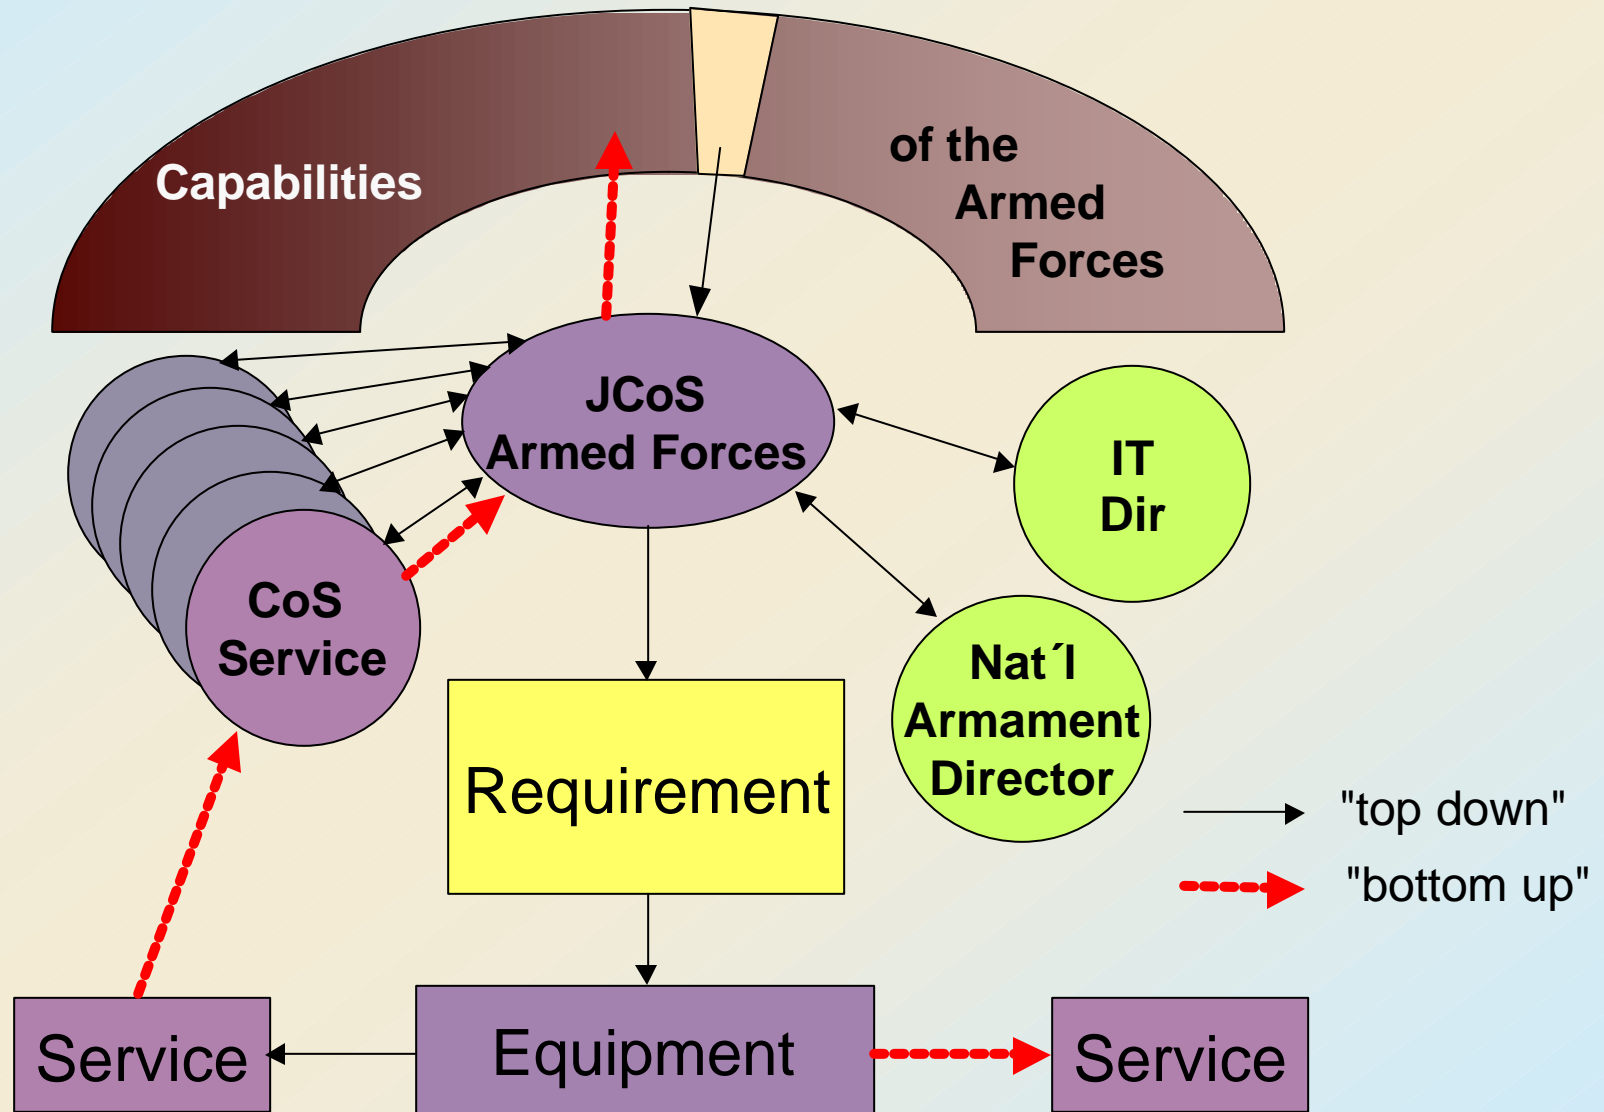

DoD 5000

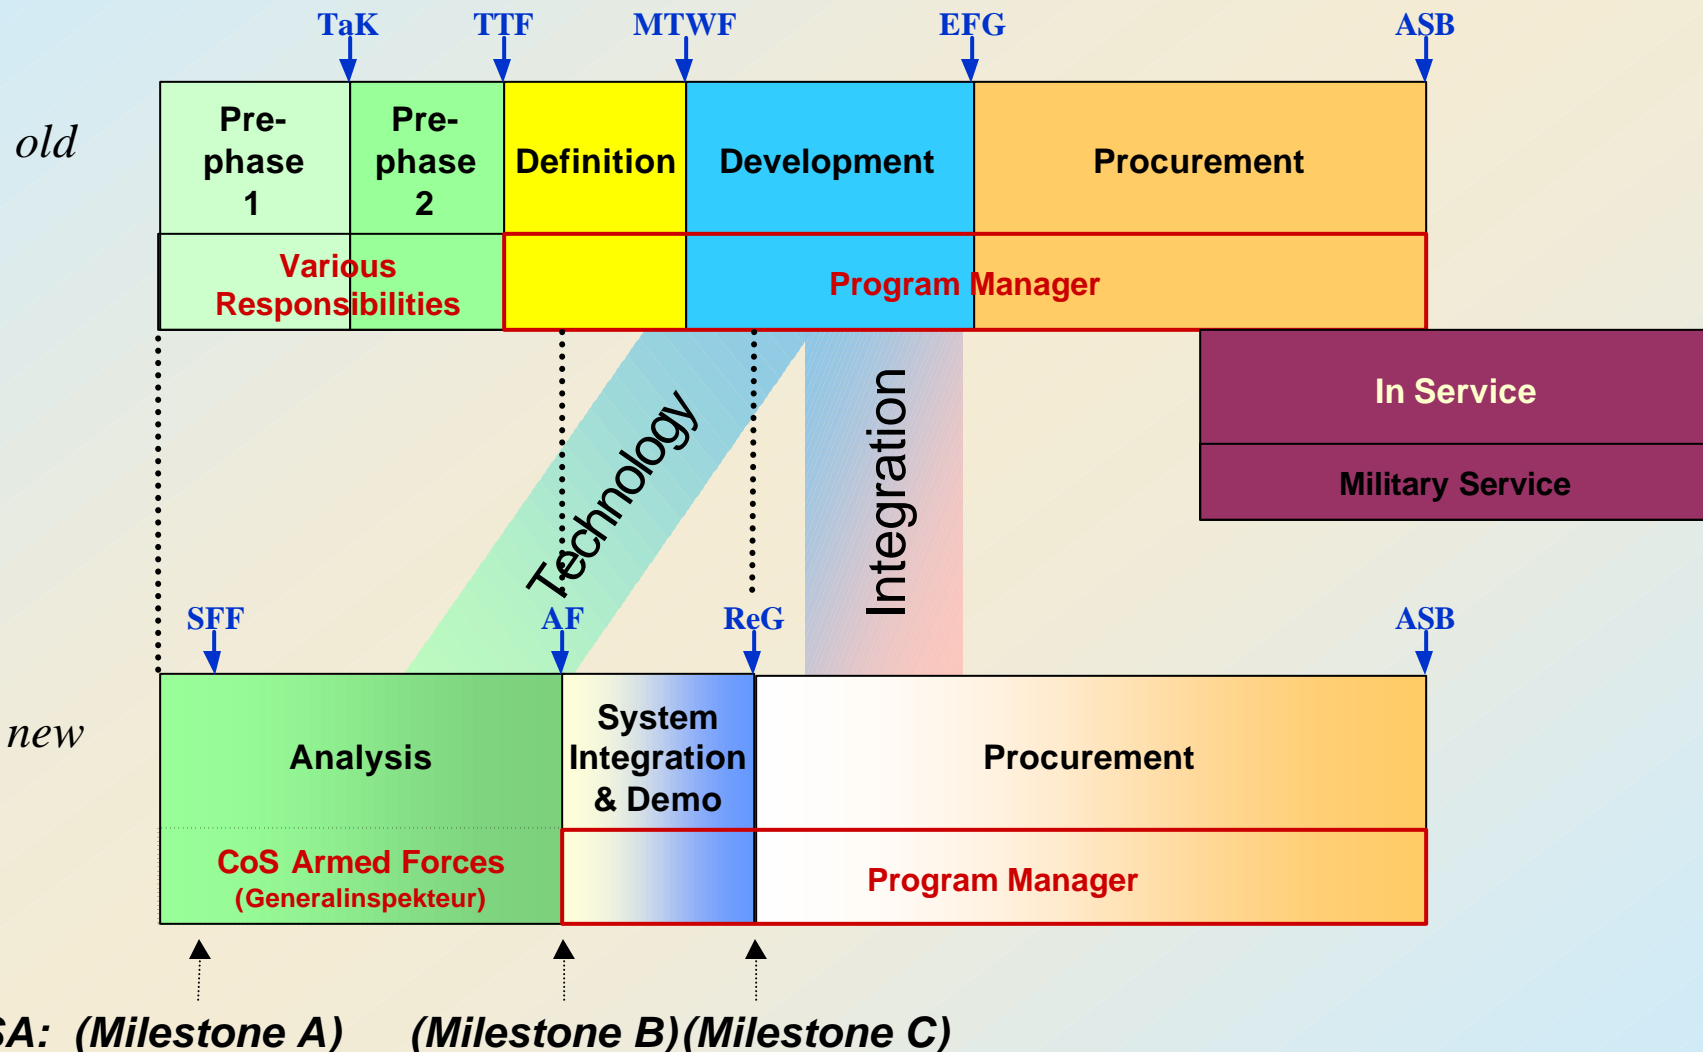

The Management of the CPM 2001

German Acquisition Process

Examples for Time Critical Support

Marder – mine protection

Allschutztransportfahrzeug
(ATF) - Transport Vehicle

Infanterist
Der
Zukunft
(Future Warrior)

Quarter and supply container

Protection west
(schutzklasse IV)

New Missions for the German Armed Forces Require Streamlined Acquisition Management

Gerhard Brauer
NDIA T&E Conference, February 24 - March 1, 2002